SEEKS A LONG LOST BROTHER.

Captain Jenkins Has Maintained a Strict Vigilance for Many Years.

According to the declarations of the friends of Captain Jenkins, and by his confession, he examines with critical care the contents of the daily newspapers and never fails to find an article of the kind.

This was born of a romance begun in Lexington, Mo., way back in the '40s—a romance which has since become a legend.

In 1850 Mississippi river steamboats were more numerous than today. This was the time of the gold fever in California.

The only route west at that time was by steamer to Independence Landing. The Kansas City steamer was the only one of the kind.

At William Jenkins, father of Colonel Hunter Ben Jenkins, was one of the early pioneers from Virginia. The Virginia hotel, situated on the river bank, was the home of the Jenkins family.

He was the father of nine children. The oldest was a son, Captain Hunter Ben Jenkins, and a daughter, Mrs. Saphronia Brown, St. Clair Jenkins, the lost brother, who was believed to be dead, he now thought.

It was a bright morning in June, almost a half century ago, that 6-year-old St. Clair Jenkins, the youngest child of the household, left the hotel on the river bank.

The family was frantic. Mrs. Jenkins was prostrated, and for many weeks he had been sought in vain.

The town of Shakespeare, why it was ever called that name, is a mystery. It is said that the name was given to the town by a man who was a great lover of the drama.

"About this time Bill Tetterburn turned up at Shakespeare. He was a tall, thin fellow, with a long nose and a thin mustache.

Bill Tetterburn had plenty of money and was a great lover of the drama. He was a tall, thin fellow, with a long nose and a thin mustache.

WOMEN WHO BUY FOR SHOPS.

A GOOD WORKER IN THIS LINE GETS FROM $6,000 TO $8,000 PER YEAR.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A woman interested in the question has compiled a list of women who buy for large shops throughout the United States.

There are over 200 names registered in this list, and those able to judge state that there are not 200 women who buy for shops whose names have not yet been secured.

"You can depend upon it that whenever you find a woman who buys for a shop, she is a good worker. It is because she is exceptionally qualified for her work."

There are at least 50 per cent more women buyers in the trade now than there were six years ago, this authority adds.
